I play as Sparta now even the Reform not helping me with the population My guess is that nobles constantly migrate to newly conquered regions and you deplete noble pop by replenishment and then your cities grow to their population limits (mainly 2nd and 3rd class) and then overcrowding kicks in and you are left with 200 nobles per city. But it not efficient if you are in a Empire war or have multiple politic front and I need every province to have good amounts of SPARTAN citizens to hold up multiple front I play as Sparta now even the Reform not helping me with the population October 01, 2018, 07:05 AM #2 Buildings (temples for example). Thats too low IMO and limits your recruitment options (gameplay-wise) Last edited by Nordling; October 01, 2018 at 08:00 AM. 2nd and 3rd class grow too fast and then there is no room in cities for nobility to reproduce due to overcrowding penalties. I recruited max 2-3 noble cav units in the capital during my campaign. Personally I would do that solely for provincial capitals and leave "almost-noble-free" minor settlements as they are. I started Arche Bosphorus campaign with 2.2k nobles in my capital. I highlighted this issue in one of my posts on some other thread. any tips to build up 1st citizen up to 1k or 2k? Finally, conquest. October 01, 2018, 06:47 AM #1 Hi guys, I really need some help with balancing out the population pool, somehow my 1st citizen maximum per settlement is 200-250ish max no more than that. There are some techs as well. My guess is the mechanic explained above - nobles migrate to Cities, they can not reproduce quickly enough to cover this migration and then overlapping the overlapping is felt and is 300 nobles. Edit: This could be offset by a greater growth bonus for the 1st pop class of the city's main buildings chain expansion. You do not forget to convert the regions conquered to your culture the maximum possible and wait ... There are many buildings with pop growth boni, constructed those. With Sparta in general you need to accept that you will have in the maximum half pile of true Spartans in all your impeached to the middle of the afternoon game. This is very low IMO and limits your recruitment options (in terms of gameplay) yes, this was the problem that I have my God and I thought my construction chain was not enough good or do something wrong October 1, 2018, 02:28 pm # 5 when I played sparta I was having the same problem and I had made the hellas a pure military province, so I was able to recruit hoplites In Sparta with 2 gold chevron. I like to make a major spartan stack and all other stacks with mercenary / aor troops and use the real excitement only for the most important and always paired battles with another stack of garbage that will absorb the low October 1 2018, 07:50 AM # 3 Originally Posted by Quachandy99 Oliga Personal, I really need some help to balance the population, somehow my 1st maximum citizen by settlement is From 200-250ish no more than that.
